

Worry and experience of harm from everyday risks

People in Mongolia are most worried about road and traffic accidents (95%) and severe weather events (94%) causing them serious harm, the two highest levels of concern among the ten risks asked about. Across all ten, worry in Mongolia runs higher than the global average. Concern far outstrips lived experience, however: while 95% worry about road and traffic accidents, only 6% have actually been harmed by it in the past two years. The harm most commonly experienced in Mongolia is the air they breathe (9%). The gap between worry and experience is widest for wildfires, where 93% are worried but 1% have actually been affected.
